

Hungarian Folk-Tales (Oxford Myths and Legends)

Long ago, when Hungarians used to tell each other tales in the evenings, they thought up some of the most amazing things. In this edition, Hungarian-born Val Biro retells and illustrates a favorite selection of his countrys stories. Among them, goblins rain from the sky; the Mayors mares egg gives birth to a rabbit; and Amalfi, son of the apple, finds his destiny in a flying palace.
